

FCC: It would be a great disservice to consumers to restrict XM and Sirius Satellite Radio networks from having local traffic reports. The traffic reports on XM are MUCH better than what is available through conventional radio. Preventing this useful service will only hurt the consumer. Please do the right thing for the consumer, not commercial interests who are lobbying for this restriction. In a free market, the consumer decides and XM provides a very useful, viable choice. If local stations get better traffic reports than XM, then consumers will choose those when they need traffic reports. However, XM is doing a MUCH better job than local stations in my area. Thanks for your consideration...Tom Sullivan
